Looking for an upper-division or graduate course that complements any program in the humanities, sciences, or arts? Want to learn something new?

PHENOMENOLOGY

PHIL 41055 (CRN #: 17075) / PHIL 51055 (CRN #: 17083)
Spring 2021 • MW 12:30-1:45 • Remote Delivery
Professor: Dr. Gina Zavota

This course will provide an in-depth introduction to the phenomenological movement, from its origin in the thought of 20th-century philosopher Edmund Husserl and his contemporaries, through such canonical thinkers as Martin Heidegger and Maurice Merleau-Ponty, to various contemporary developments. Substantial time will be devoted to considering applications of phenomenology to disciplines in the humanities, sciences, and/or arts, chosen based on student interest. Come learn about a fascinating methodology that has had significant influence on many fields of study!

Prerequisites: PHIL 41055 – One course from PHIL 31001-31020
PHIL 51055 – Graduate standing

For further information, contact gzavota@kent.edu