

John,

I'm not sure if I was mentioned to you or not, by your cousin Jack Hubbard. My name is Allison Brause. I'm a friend of Jack's from work. I am planning to go to Kent State next fall and I have a couple of questions that I think you may be able to answer for me. I was asked to apply to the Honor's College (to my big surprise) and I have a few apprehensions about it. I'm extremely afraid that I'll be classified as a "brain", "egghead", no fun, studious girl. I'm lucky enough to get good grades but believe me that isn't my only concern. I want to have a good time at school too. Are the kids in the Honor's College alienated from everyone else? I also heard that at some colleges honor's students had their own dorms so that the "atmosphere would be more conducive to learning" (as the saying goes). Please tell me that it isn't like that at Kent! I already have one of the tri-towers picked as the dorm I want and don't feel like changing to one with only kids that study. The rest of the program at the Honor's College seems to be what I'd want. I go to a progressive high school now, with independent study, discussion groups etc. and I would like to continue a program like that.

I'd also appreciate it if you could tell me what the social life is like at Kent. Are fraternities and Sororities big on campus? Tell all about Kent from a student's point of view, I've already heard from the adminastions' view.

I hope you don't mind me asking all these questions but if you do you have Jack to blame because he gave me your address.

Thanks,
Allison Krause

If you do decide to answer all these questions (and I wouldn't blame you if you didn't want to) my
